Subject: Literary Event

Hi!

My name is Paddy Hirsch. I'm an Irish expatriate, living in Los Angeles, writing historical thrillers about the Irish in post-colonial New York. My second novel, Hudson's Kill comes out on September 17, and I wanted to let you know I'm reading from the book and signing copies in La Jolla at Warwick's Bookstore on Monday 30 September.

I wondered if you might be interested in my sending you an advance reading copy of the book. I'd be honored if you'd consider including details of the reading on your events page. I think it could be of great interest to members of the Irish American community interested in our history of that period - not to mention to murder mystery and historical fiction fans - and I'd love to meet with some fellow Hibernians whilst I'm in town.

Thanks for your consideration!

Paddy

Hello,

I am writing to you to invite The Irish Center of Southern California to participate in the 2020 Herstory Light Festival over the weekend of Brigid's Day (Friday 31st January – Monday 3rd February 2020) in honour of Ireland's triple goddess and matron Saint.

Herstory, the Irish women's storytelling movement, has partnered with RTÉ, Underground Films and EPIC The Irish Emigration Museum to bring you the Herstory 20/20 Project. This is the greatest women's storytelling project ever created in Ireland, uncovering forgotten but fascinating women's stories from history, mythology and contemporary culture. Click here to read the RTÉ article.

Herstory 20/20 will commence in September 2019 and run for 6 months across RTÉ TV and Digital, with interactive projects for adults and school children across the island of Ireland and internationally in our diaspora worldwide. The project features a TV documentary series and podcast series produced by award-winning production company Underground Films, the International Herstory Light Festival, children's TV series, schools workshops, an interactive online hub, and a few surprises. Herstory 20/20 is a legacy project and a permanent digital educational resource that will give young people awe-inspiring female role models for generations to come.

Herstory 20/20 launches this September when school children across the island of Ireland are invited to participate in a treasure hunt workshop to discover lost women's stories in their families and local communities and create portrait art of their heroines.

I have attached a brochure with all the information you need to participate.

If you have any questions please get in touch.

Best regards,

The Celtic Arts Center

Preserving and Promoting the Cultures and Languages of the Celtic Nations

We Want You!

We are now accepting candidate nominations for the Board of Directors.

The Center needs your experience and skills in planning and implementing its future. Please consider being a part of our team.

Dear Celtic Arts Center Members:

Thank you for your continued support and interest in the future of An Claidheamh Soluis/The Celtic Arts Center.

The Center needs your experience and skills in planning and implementing its future. It's time for you, the members, to decide from within your ranks the leaders who will guide the Center into its exciting future. You can do that by joining its Board of Directors. The Board member job description is included below to give you a better understanding of the expectations and the responsibilities such a position holds in this non-profit, member supported and managed cultural arts organization.

According to our by-laws, 3–12 Board members will serve a term of two consecutive years. When that term is up, the Board member must either seek re-election or let their term expire so that they can be replaced by a new candidate. We currently have up to 9 positions available on the Board in the upcoming election.

The following Board members are in ‘mid-term’ and remain on the Board until the fall of 2020: Denise Ovaldson-Louie, Larry Malley, and Karl Klein.

The following Board members have reached the end of their terms and have the option to either seek re-election or retire from their seats: Larry Brown, Douglas R. Dean, and Tom Louie. (There are currently six vacant seats too.) The maximum number of open positions on the Board available in this election is 9 positions.

Only current ACS/CAC members may serve on the Board of Directors, nominate members, or vote in the election. If you are interested in running for the Board or voting in the election, now would be a great time to become a member or renew your membership, if applicable. Please check your membership expiration date which is displayed next to your name in the header at the top of this email.

If you are interested in running, please submit in writing your name, a brief biography, and vision statement (300 words max) to this year's election committee.

We request that submissions be received via an email message to elections@celticartscenter.com by midnight, August 30, 2019. The election committee will then compile the list of candidates for the forthcoming election ballots which will be made available to current members on September 16th, 2019. There will be opportunities for anonymous online voting and for in-person voting.

- Nomination Submission due by: 08/30/2019 Midnight
- Voting Ballot Submission due by: 09/16/2019 Midnight
- Election Results announced at Membership Social: 09/30/2019 Monday
- Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have any questions. Also, our organization's by-laws are available for review on our website, www.celticartscenter.com.

Thank you for your consideration,

The 2019 Elections Committee for the ACS/CAC Board of Directors

— Larry Malley— Denise Ovaldson-Louie

The Celtic Arts Center needs your energy, enthusiasm, and especially your can-do attitude, to shape and direct the future. There is much work to be done and the Center needs strong leadership now.

== ACS/CAC Board Member Job Description ==

Board member responsibilities include: attendance and participation at board meetings; voting on Board actions, contributing to discussions, and serving on at least one committee and/or assisting in Center projects and events. Member ad-hoc responsibilities, when appropriate, include representing the organization to the membership and the community at large at functions and events; helping when and wherever possible. Skills required: Commitment and adherence to the organization's mission statement; written and oral communication skills, and strong and effective organizational skills. Leadership experience in non-profit organizations is beneficial though not required.

The standard of behavior at An Claidheamh Soluis / The Celtic Arts Center is that all staff, volunteers, and board members scrupulously avoid any conflict of interest between the interests of the organization on one hand, and personal, professional, and business interests on the other. This includes avoiding actual conflicts of interest as well as perceptions of conflicts of interest.

Currently ACS/CAC Board meetings are held on the first Tuesday of each month and are open to the members. Attendance is required of all sitting Board members. Discussions generally include fiscal management; facilities management; organizing and planning of classes and events; grant writing and fundraising; coordinating of volunteers; and exploring new programming and new directions within the scope of our mission.

Hello everybody,

It's an honor to be asked to contribute some written articles to the Irish Center of Southern California Newsletter. As most of you know I have been living and performing Irish music for over forty years in the Los Angeles and Orange County areas. I'm delighted to continue playing for all of you and look forward to this opportunity to connect with you through writing in the monthly newsletter.

I would like to let you know that I was up in Butte, Montana a couple of weekends ago performing solo at their An Rí Rá Festival. For those of you who don't know, Butte is the most Irish town in America ...per capita..this is because when Marcus Daly from Co. Cavan discovered gold and silver in Butte in 1880, he sent word directly back to Ireland, stating "Don't stop in America, come to Butte and get a job". The real discovery was made not long after when the gold and silver was worked out, they discovered the richest veins of copper anywhere in the world at that time and it became the motherlode and supplied the United States with copper wiring for electricity and the munitions for both World Wars.

This call was answered by thousands of Irish who, in the years following the Great Hunger, the Famine years, took the chance and left many parts of Ireland, particularly the South West and made the long ocean and trans continental trek to the Rocky Mountains. They worked above and below the ground, and communed with fellow Irish, raised families and built the town of Butte to 100,000 people by 1900. There were many people from other countries who heard the call, miners from Wales, Croatia, Finland, Cornwall and Italy made up the bulk besides the Irish, but the folks from our Eire ruled the town and there were areas know as Dublin Gulch, Corktown, and Finntown. There was also a strong contingent of Chinese who were involved more in the service and mercantile businesses. There was great support for the Ancient Order of Hibernians, which continues today, the Knights of Columbus, The GAA, the Gaelic League and other Irish organizations. Regular Gaelic football games took place between Butte and the smelting town of Anaconda nearby. Eamon DeValera and Countess Markievicz on separate occasions came to Butte in the 1920's to raise money for the Irish cause.

Mining was a tough, hard and sometimes deadly business. Many miners died in the mines in Butte and it was not unusual for a woman to have been married several times because of deaths of husbands and the need to keep food on the table for families.

It was my pleasure this past April to lead a tour of twenty one people from Butte and another fourteen from the So Cal area back to West Cork where the copper mines in Allihies on the Beara Peninsula stopped producing in 1872, and thousands of people left the area for Butte in the following years. Mining continued in Butte up through the 1970's but very little is happening underground these days. It's a wonderful Irish town to visit, the people retain their Irish heritage with great pride and I'm looking forward to escorting another group back to West Cork on my Wild Atlantic Way tour next April. Everyone is welcome to join us or travel with me on my Ancient East Tour earlier in the month next April. For full details, please visit my website <https://www.kenomalley.com/ireland-tours-2020>.

I have been leading tours to Ireland for the last fifteen years and have earned the reputation of taking "the roads less travelled" and providing the finest in accommodations, luxury coach and entertainment as we visit Ireland's great heritage sites and some not so well known.

My best to all of you, agus go néirí an bóthair libh..

Ken

Voyage of Reason

Caught in the net of dead tradition they struggle to be free,
 Scared by the crossfire of ideals in search of identity,
 Would that the wind of reason could fill their hearts so sore,
 The beacon of brotherhood beacons on that O so distant shore.

The compass points ahead not back three hundred years or more,
 Excess cargo of prejudice and pride will slow the progress as before,
 Let no man say he knows the way in this uncharted course,
 If elusive truth is to be found twill be by peace not force.

When children die, the tide must turn or all will drown in insanity,
 The blood of innocence will not erase the deeds of absurdity,
 The storm will rage and unleash its fury on those who will not see
 We are all fellow travelers on this ship called earth
 Our common bond, mortality.

So, forget the names of William and James and dates out of history
 Overboard with labels that separate down with the flag of bigotry,
 Full speed ahead to the harbor of Hope so that this long night end
 Just one requirement to disembark that all men call each other, friend.

Because he was a humble and modest man, Carney didn't talk about baby records or an earlier part of his life when records were kept on his Hall of Fame Gaelic football career as a young man in Ireland where he is considered a legendary hero akin to Willie Mays or Babe Ruth in American baseball.

No matter what time it was or where he was, whether it was midnight or whether he was in the middle of a golf game, when Dr. Padraig Carney got the call, he stopped what he was doing and delivered another baby.

He did that at least 2,000 times in his more than four decades as an obstetrician-gynecologist in Long Beach. That may have been a record for most babies delivered by one doctor in Long Beach history, but no one knows for sure because such statistics are not readily available, if at all. He even delivered six of his 10 grandchildren.

Because he was a humble and modest man, Carney didn't talk about baby records or an earlier part of his life when records were kept on his Hall of Fame Gaelic football career as a young man in Ireland where he is considered a legendary hero akin to Willie Mays or Babe Ruth in American baseball.

Carney, 91, died June 8 in San Juan Capistrano after a brief illness, according to Terence Carney, an attorney in Orange County and one of the doctor's three sons and one daughter. Carney and his wife, Moira, had lived in Long Beach for more than 50 years. He moved to San Juan Capistrano after she died in 2017.

"Dr. Carney was an excellent doctor and a leader in the medical community who made a difference in making Long Beach a better place," said Dr. Gainer Pillsbury, a longtime obstetrician-gynecologist in Long Beach. "When he went back to Ireland for visits, he was considered a rock star. He was quite a guy." Gainer said Carney was a leader in treating pregnant women with Rh-negative blood factors which could cause serious problems for babies, including death. As chief of staff at Long Beach Memorial, Carney introduced programs for the use of Rh immune globulin, a vaccine developed in the 1960s to prevent Rh blood disease in babies. He also was instrumental in establishing the Preferred Provider Organization in recognition of the changing practice of medicine, his son said.

Carney was born on Jan. 7, 1928 in Treenagher, County Mayo, in the Irish Republic, the only child of Thomas and Ellen Carney, who both fought in the Irish War of Independence.

As a young boy he developed a love for Gaelic football, a cross between soccer and rugby, and Ireland's most watched sport. When he was 17 in 1945, he debuted with the Mayo team and scored with his first kick of the game.

In an interview with Daniel O'Boyle of the Los Angeles Times last year, Carney said, "As soon as I stepped on the field, I felt like I could hold my own out there."

Hold his own he did. Considered one of the best players ever in Ireland, he was co-captain of the County Mayo teams that won All-Ireland championships in 1950 and 1951. Knowing he couldn't make a living playing football, Carney turned his attention to medicine and earned his medical degree from University College Dublin in 1951. In 1954 he had gone to New York to concentrate on a post-graduate course at St. Clare's Hospital when he got a call from Mayo County officials who wanted him back to play in a semi-final game. So they put Carney on a plane and flew him to the game where he played a key role in defeating Dublin.

From then on he became known as “The Flying Doctor.” In 2001 Ireland recognized Carney for his football exploits by placing his portrait on a stamp when he was inducted into the nation’s first football Hall of Fame. His death was big news in Irish newspapers.

On Oct. 14, 1953, Carney met and married his wife, Moira McCabe, who was studying to be an ophthalmologist but put that aside when they moved to Long Beach and raised three sons—Brian, Terence and Cormac—and a daughter, Sheila Thalheimer. The siblings all graduated from St. Anthony High School. Cormac is a federal judge now and was a star wide receiver on the UCLA football team which beat Michigan in the 1983 Rose Bowl. Brian is an orthopedic surgeon, and Sheila is the Library Director at the John Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Carney was in practice in Long Beach by himself which meant he had to be available at all times of the day and night.

“He was very independent and worked very hard,” said his son, Terence. “Because he had no partners, he would have to answer all his calls himself. I remember being on the golf course at Skylinks and his beeper would go off. This was before cell phones. He would leave the course, deliver a baby and then sometimes come back to play some more. He really liked delivering babies. He took great pride in treating his patients and providing them with the best care.”

Terence Carney said his dad had a strong work ethic and “a no nonsense manner.”

But that didn’t mean he didn’t have a sense of humor, said Terence’s wife, Cindy.

“He loved singing Irish songs and having all of us sing his favorites, from “Moonlight in Mayo” to the “Rose of Tralee,” she said. “As embarrassing as it was to us, it gave him great joy.”

She also sent Southern California News Group a photo showing her father-in-law holding Jake, one of his grandchildren he had just delivered in 1983. In the photo, Dr. Carney is wearing a bib marked with, “Kiss me. I’m a grandfather.”

Cormac Carney said he learned many life lessons from his father but said the one he will always remember is how he lived the last few months of his life. His father had chronic heart and kidney failure and was confined to a bed and a wheelchair, he said.

“But he never complained or felt sorry for himself,” Cormac said. “He lived each day to its fullest, finding joy and happiness in the most trivial things, whether that be a workout, an In-N-Out shake or a conversation with a family member.

One day, he was not able to get out of bed. He turned to me and asked me to look at him and smile. He then said, ‘Now, it has been a good day.’ He was a courageous and loving man, the most positive person that I have ever met. I miss him terribly.”

Survivors include his sons Brian (Amy), Terence (Cindy), and Cormac (Mary Beth), daughter Sheila Thalheimer (Mark), 10 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.
